Audience Painpoints

Buyers face unclear product choices, limiting confidence; brand seen chiefly as party tequila, with discount messaging diluting premium aspirations, while heritage content suffers sporadic engagement, highlighting audience divides.

Evidence

Users explicitly ask where to buy and deliberate between Gold, Silver, and mixes.

Comments and hashtags often revolve around shots and party culture.

Posts highlight pricing deals and low-cost launches, stressing affordability.

Heritage and history posts receive minimal interaction compared to party or cocktail content.

Expressions

Customer questions and selective engagement on variant posts display this navigation struggle vividly.

Frequent partying mentions and lack of upscale positioning cause brand siloing as ‘party tequila’.

Sales and launch messaging heavily features discounts, provoking price-driven audience mindsets.

Low engagement rates on educational posts compared with social, event-based content illustrate split priorities.
