Audience Profile

This audience is deeply connected to Chipotle’s cultural vibe but grapples with price hikes, shrinking portions, and ethical concerns. They seek affordable quality, transparent communication, and authentic brand care. Their loyalty hinges on regaining trust through value and culturally resonant engagement.

NEEDS

Affordable, value-aligned pricing matching portion expectations.

Consistent product quality and accurate fulfillment.

Clear communication on product availability and promotions.

OBJECTIONS

Perception of price gouging alienates core customers.

Concerns over food quality and safety undermine brand trust.

Skepticism toward brand ethics related to political donations.

DESIRES

Return of beloved menu items evoking nostalgia and flavor excitement.

Accessible indulgence that fits within constrained budgets.

Engagement with playful, culturally timed campaigns and interactive content.

PAIN POINTS

Shrinking portions paired with rising costs cause customer frustration.

Inconsistent quality and contamination risk diminish trust dramatically.

Opaque promotional rules and menu changes frustrate engagement.

Yapping about how much things have changed like the size of my burrito that’s basically palm sized now 🙄

The prices are higher and the portions are smaller.

Same order, prices increased by $30, and diluted ingredients. I went to chipotle in 2012 and it was nice and fresh. Now it’s just glorified slop on a plate.

I got food poisoning 2 days ago from the chicken and had to go to the ER!

There was a bug in my chipotle bowl
